The Bugle Call' at New Orleans.

Of the walling bugle call.

Death in the murk and mire and mid;
Death in purple and gold, and death
Thick in the old man's stagnant hood,
And death in the baby's fragrant breattough and ranged, or robed in silk.
Fed on the die of rose and milk;
Or fedon the garbage and carrion sten
Of the reeking sewers' deadly treuch,
On all around,
And over them all, with a dying fail
Flows the womanish, sorrowful sound
Of the walling bugle call.

Allke to the call respond in pain; Cursing or praying but all in vain; For all around, And over them all, with a dying fail, Flows the womaniah, sorrowful sound Of the walling hingle call. Of the walling bugle call.
Until the last great day of days,
When rolls the scroll of the parching
And stars start out amid the blaze
Like cluders failling from on high;
The dead whall sleep until blat day,
When all that is shall pass away;
And earth shall shrink in all her caves
To give up her myrlad, myrlad graves;
And all around,
And over them all this mortal pall
Lift to the breaking, hursting sound
Of the dual bugle call.
